

Not My Song to Sing: Music and lyrics by Brittany Jean

He kneels down, looks up at her
A promised love, a diamond ring
Her love, her man, their happy home
That's not my song to sing
Years go by
On their porch, side by side
Their little ones at play
Holding hands with grateful hearts
Not yet my song to sing

Someday I hope it will be
But today this song's not mine
It belongs to those who've made it through
The vows, the storms, and time
Someday I hope to promise
This dance through life to you
My heart for you forever
I'll sing this love song too

Slower walks, slower pace
Love still strong
Reflecting on God's loving grace
Still not my song to sing

Someday I hope it will be
But today this song's not mine
It belongs to those who've made it through
The vows, the storms, and time
Someday I hope to promise
This dance through life to you
My heart for you forever
I'll sing this love song too

'Cause when it's my song to sing
You'll know it from the start
You'll see it in my eyes
And sense it in my heart
And when I give my promise for
This dance through life to you
My heart for you forever
We'll sing this love song too
Oh we'll sing too
