

Say You Remember Me: Music and lyrics by Brittany Jean

Let me paint you a picture of a stone house
Pretty as a poem that can't make a sound
Imagine walking through the door
Find the jasmine and moonbeams in a drawer
Can you see it now?

Let me spin you a story of two who lived here
And we might catch 'em dancing before they disappear...
There's an echo of an old romance
There's a let go and take a chance on me
Can you see them now?

Say you remember me...
Am I someone you once knew?
Don't say you've forgotten me
Are you losin' me like I am losing you?
Say you remember me...

Let me show you the tapestry—catch her at sundown
Indigo threads woven in close for a gown
In sapphire, her eyes are on you
A bronze wire could hang this for the view
Can you see her now?

Let me sing you the ballad of your own time
Colorful, wonderful, easy on my mind
It's classic—a heart was won
Oh, it's magic to love and to be loved
Can you see me now?

Say you remember me...
Am I someone you once knew?
Don't say you've forgotten me
Are you losin' me like I am losing you?
Say you remember me...
Say you remember me...
Remember me...
Remember... remember, remem...

He looked at me and said,
“Say you remember me...
Am I someone you once knew?
Don't say you've forgotten me
Are you losin' me like I am losing you?
Say you remember me...”
